KNOWING OUR CHILDREN!

Let's think about our children and the intelligence they have while growing up.

We want to understand our children and their unique talents and strengths.

It is worthwhile to look at how experts in human development view the growing child. Children throughout the world go through the same recognizable stages of their development at about the age as those children everywhere.

by Uncle Mark Jeffers

LET'S CONSIDER THESE EIGHT AREAS OF INTELLIGENCE THAT WE CAN RECOGNIZE IN YOUNG PEOPLE

* Musical Intelligence is the ability to produce and respond to music.

* Bodily-kinesthetic Intelligence is the ability to use one's body to solve problems.

* Logical-mathematical Intelligence is the ability to understand the basic properties of numbers and the principles of cause and effect.

* Linguistic Intelligence is the ability to use language to express ideas and learn new words or other languages.

* Spatial Intelligence The ability to form a mental image of spatial layouts.

* Interpersonal Intelligence is the ability to understand other people and work with them.

* Intrapersonal Intelligence is the ability to understand things about oneself.

* Naturalist Intelligence is the ability to recognize plants and animals in the environment.

Most teachers and caregivers understand the idea that in any group of children there is a rainbow of differences. Keeping in mind this 'rainbow' idea, helps them to provide a variety of educational activities and experiences to assist all of their children to grow to their full potential.
